Dear Martha Jane,

Thank you for including me in the invitation to the Stauffer reunion.

The only reason I ever came was because of Mother.
She loved her relatives in Wabash so much.

I will always be sorry
we did not get to the one the last year she lived. She was so disappointed. I really grafted on that one.

Did you know my cousin,
Leelia Higgins, died on June 28th.
So much happened to us right

Thanks again for your kindness over the years.

Dear Martha Jane:-

You have been so good to write to me. Two years ago Lawrence was in the Hospital 11 days and had blood transfusions etc. and two after the Reunion go back for more transfusions & Hospital care. He has looked bad and losing more weight and yesterday fell and cracked a couple of ribs and back to Hospital for more blood and some inward bleeding from the fall. Kathy & I went to see him a couple of weeks ago. He was sitting in a big chair all stretched out & and didn't get up while we were there. I was really alarmed when he said he has bed sore too. Ed and Pauline were there for awhile and put up a big ceiling fan with lights, those big arms for both tub and other things. We were late to see him get in this shape. I know they have plenty to eat and gave ~~egg~~ some yellow tomatoes which were delicious and sweet potatoes. I use a walker practically all the time and can't get along without it, can fold it up to go in the car.
Late Mon.

Don called the Hospital and he is comfortable and will be home in a few days. I wish I knew what could be done to build up blood.

The whole family was at the granddaughters at Lake James for dinner

FORT WAYNE — Esther R. Kempel, 92, Fort Wayne, died at 5 a.m. Tuesday at the Woodview

Sept 8.

Dear Martha Jane:

Well, It has happened. Lawrence tried to walk and fell and broke a couple ribs which bled some and he didn't last long after that. He had talked things over with John and Ed too.

Cathy took me to their house ^{to} a little over a week ago. He was stretched out on a folding chair but didn't try to get up. So the second time more blood was given.

The Funeral is Thurs. at 1:30 at a place real close to the downtown building ^{Court House} with a Clock. I couldn't remember the short name of Funeral but Glen was taken there when he died.

I would appreciate it if his name was put in the paper. We had lots of cousins and he liked so well to go to the Reunion.

I had my choice so will go to Funeral home Creek Church afterwards but we won't stay for that. I didn't know till yesterday and don't know what Newspaper name is published there, if this can be done etc. and if not etc. One can't always do what they would like.

Love & Best Wishes.

26 June 1998

Dear Ones:

Just got your card announcing the 96th Stoesser Reunion with your newsy note.

Regret to inform you that Mary died early the morning of 23 June. On 3 March she fell and broke her right femur. The bone did not heal, and on 26 May she fell again and did some more damage to the bone. She spent the entire time from 3 March to death in hospitals and a convalescent home. Her end was brought on by a serious stroke on 3 June from which she never regained consciousness.

I would have liked to attend a Stoesser reunion but for several years knew that I never would.

Wrote a note to Anna yesterday. You folks and Anna are my only contacts there, so would you please inform them firmly

✓ We have 40 acres - fir trees mostly - 2 acres has oak bldgs & garden. Bill usually sells a load of logs each year. Have 2 dogs, Widge & Stormy. The latter aptly named. They were on a busy highway. That ends with a bridge over to the little island. (Steamboat ^{is}) There's an inlet behind where we are situated on water. They grow oysters back there. Excellent ones I remember the hen we used to get at Logansport - shelled & tough - also think mother cooked them too long - think Tong Renz them too. Also get manila clams - (fry or chowder) I like to freeze them ^{1st} - it tenderizes. I do have a little typos writer try to use in next mail. Don't overeat at the Reunion -

An old barn on Mill Creek Pike, originally owned by the founders of what is now known as the Belgian Draft Horse Corporation of America, has been placed on the National Register of Historic Places.

With that accomplished, the family that now owns the barn wants to restore it and use it as a museum, learning center and entertainment facility.

West Mill Creek Pike, is located on a farm owned by Elizabeth "Libby" Miller, wife of the late Woody Miller. The Millers bought the farm, located east of the former Manor Care facility, in 1960 from Charles and Esther Long.

But the story begins long before that. The property was originally given to Mee-cho-ne-quah, a Miami Indian, as part of the Treaty of Paradise Spring in 1826. He sold it 15 years later to Chief Richardville, who had several homes in the area.

One year later, Chief Richardville sold it to his children and, in 1846, they sold it to Jesse Hutchens. In 1850, the farm was sold to Samuel and Prudence Teague. Prudence was an itinerant Friends minister.

She and her husband are believed to be charter members (1851) of the Wabash Friends Church. Both are buried in the Friends Cemetery on Mill Creek Pike.

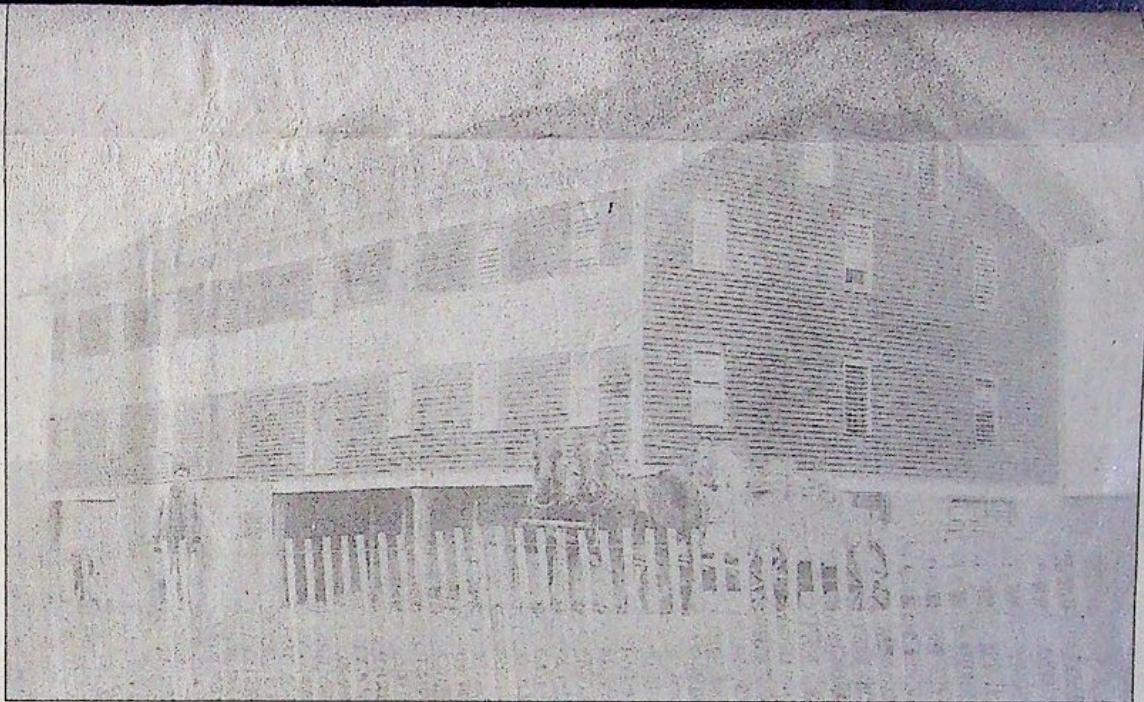

In 1861, the Teagues hired master carpenter Nathan Hubbard, also a Quaker, to build the barn. Hubbard started the barn, took time off to fight in the Civil War, then returned to finish it. It was completed in 1868.

Greg Danner, is how the barn looks today. The photo on the right, provided by Marilyn Miller, whose mother-in-law owns the barn. She got the picture from Jean Wilson, who once lived on the farm. Mrs. Wilson had no idea who the people in the picture are.

Experts on old barns have told the Millers that the barn was probably first intended to be used as a very progressive, state-of-the-art dairy farm. It was estimated to cost $3,000 to $4,000 to build.

The Teagues were very wealthy, having moved here from Richmond. Mrs. Teague's obituary in the Wabash Plain Dealer said, "Mr. and Mrs. Teague moved to Wabash county in the year 1850, settling on a large tract of land south of the river ... where Mr. Teague erected a ... bank barn, which was the wonder of the inhabitants at that time."

Then, in 1888, the Teagues sold the farm to Harmon Wolf, Abraham Strauss and Nathan Meyer, who were doing business as the Wabash Importing Co. for the purpose of importing, owning and breeding horses and other animals for agricultural purposes.

The trio of Jewish immigrants came to Wabash from Germany and are buried in the Jewish Cemetery on Mill Street Extended, just west of City Park.

The company also had stables in the city at the corner of Water and Cass streets.

In 1887, Wolf and local attorney James D. Connor Jr. organized and incorporated the American Association of Importers and Breeders of Belgian Draft Horses. Today, of course, it is known as the Belgian Draft Horse Corp. of America and is located at 125 Southwood Drive, having moved there after many years at the northwest corner of Wabash and Market streets.

To complete the farm's history, the Wabash Importing Company sold the barn and farm to William and Milo Pearson in 1892 and they, in turn, sold them to Amos Hunt in 1924. Hunt sold the property to the Longs in 1953.

Marilyn Miller, who is married to Dan Miller, one of Libby's sons, undertook the project of getting the barn listed on the National Register. Last year, after she did most of the research, the family hired Sue Gilliam, an historic preservationist from Zionsville, to help with the paperwork.

Getting the barn listed on the National Register will assist the Millers in applying for grants and in accepting tax-deductible donations to help them restore the 40-by-80-foot structure.

Estimates to restore the barn have ranged from $162,000 to $290,000. The Millers have been in contact with the Belgian Draft Horse Corp. and the Wabash County Historical Museum board about helping with the project.

The Millers would be willing to donate the barn to a non-profit group if it would help them accomplish their goals, Marilyn Miller said.

She made a presentation on the barn to the annual meeting of the Belgian Draft Horse Corp. in December at the Honeywell Center and has worked closely with Oliver "Ollie" Ziegler, the group's historian, on the history and significance of the barn to the organization.

She also has located two descendants of Nathan Hubbard, the builder. One is in Kansas, Deb Epperly; the other in Missouri, Iris Wiley.

Mrs. Miller told the group in December that Ms. Epperly was "pleased that a building her ancestor built over 100 years ago is still standing." Ms. Wiley expressed a desire to visit some time and see the barn.

Today, a lot of the siding has fallen off the west side of the barn due to dry rot, which causes the boards to rot away from the nails. However, the structure is still straight, with no sagging floors, and the metal roof is intact.

The three-story barn was built with local timber, probably poplar, and the floor of the lowest level was covered with limestone taken from the hillside back by the Wabash River, which runs along the north edge of the farm. The limestones were cut to a consistent size and set up on edge to make the floor, allowing for good drainage.

Three walls of the basement's foundation are also constructed of rough-cut limestone blocks.

Another unusual feature is the double set of entrances on the north side, increasing the barn's size and usefulness.

The Millers' goal is to completely restore the barn, to include stonework, floors, siding, windows and paint. Then they would like to make it available for display areas related to the barn itself and agriculture in the area from the 1850s to 1900.

They envision displays concerning the Belgian Draft Horse Corp., the barnwright Hubbard, the early owners of the farm (Miami Indians, Quakers, Jewish horse merchants), techniques and tools used to build the barn and farming tools and techniques from the 19th Century.

Their dreams also include an open floor area with benches for school children on field trips to learn about and attempt to use old farming and building techniques, a place for gatherings of the Belgian Draft Horse Corp. and other family reunions, a place for small group to have catered country-style dinners, and a facility for barn dances and old-time music concerts.

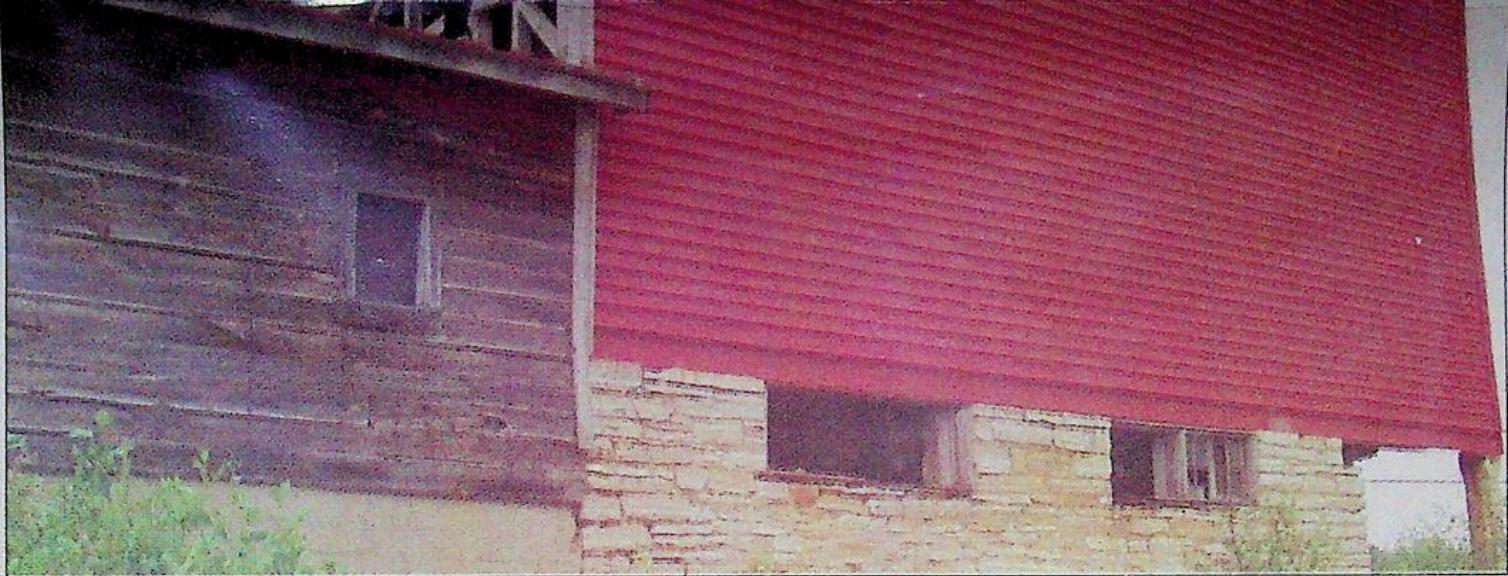

Ultimately, the Millers would like to see a small working 19th-Century farm, with livestock and Belgian draft horses doing fieldwork.

Three Wabash community leaders have joined the board of directors of the Teague Barn Project Inc.

The Teague Barn Project is a tax-exempt organization formed in September to carry out the historic preservation of the barn, located on Mill Creek Pike, that was once the home of the Wabash Importing Company, predecessor to the Belgian Draft Horse Corporation of America.

The new board members are Roger Panning, a Certified Public Accountant, Lee Ann George, a fourth-grade teacher at Southwood Elementary School, and Dan Wilson, a retired teacher and coach.

They join Susan Fagin, executive director of the Teague Barn Project, Marilyn Miller, president, Elizabeth Miller, secretary, and Daniel H. Miller, treasurer, on the board.

Elizabeth Miller is the former owner of the barn, before it was deeded to the organization in February. Daniel H. Miller is her son and Mrs. Fagin is her daughter who moved back home from Washington, D.C., in November. Marilyn Miller is Dan's wife.

Panning has operated an accounting firm in Wabash since 1974. He attended Purdue University and received his Bachelor of Science degree from Indiana University. A Vietnam veteran, he and his wife of 35 years, the former Betty Miltenberger, have two children.

See "Barn," Page 3A.

A new sign stands in front of the barn.

Group plans fund raiser

In order to raise money for its preservation efforts, the Teague Barn Project will be selling a very appropriate product at the Very Berry Strawberry Fest June 14 and other festivals around the county throughout the summer.

"... Working to increase public awareness and community participation in the project," the organization will be selling three-pound bags of "100% Genuine, Naturally Organic, Antique, Gourmet Mixed Manure."

The manure, for use in vegetable and flower gardens and strawberry patches, will be packaged in small calico-fabric bags tied with a ribbon.

The bags will sell for $3 and all proceeds will be used toward preservation efforts at the barn on Mill Creek Pike.

The board of directors is dedicated to the preservation of the barn and the establishment of a small farming museum at the site.

The booth will be in the Tremont Parking Lot.

He served 12 years on the Wabash City Council and currently is a member of the Wabash County Drainage Board.

Mrs. George graduated from Ball State University and taught in the New Castle school system before moving to Wabash in 1972. An elder in the Wabash Presbyterian Church, she was married to the late Nick George and she has one son.

Wilson, a graduate of Taylor University, taught and coached in the Fort Wayne school system. He and his wife, Melinda, have two sons and are active in the Wabash Friends Church.

Preservation of the 142-year-old barn began in November with work on the west facade. The work was necessary to repair a major beam supporting the barn's infrastructure.

Repairing the facade prevented further — potentially major — damage from being incurred from last winter's weather.

Historically accurate windows with louvered shutters are being built by Don Lee at Wilkinson Lumber and will be added at a later date.

The next project will be to fortify the foundation on the barn's north side, Mrs. Fagin said.

The Teague barn is listed on both the National and Indiana registers of historical places. The purpose of the Teague Barn Project is to establish a hands-on farming museum for school children from the surrounding area to visit and learn about life in Wabash County during 1850-1900.

The Teague Barn News, the organization's newsletter, published for the first time in May and sent out 3,000 copies across the U.S.

"We sent copies to all the members of the Belgian Draft Horse Corporation, and one gentleman called in and asked for 15 more," Mrs. Fagin said.

The organization is also looking for members to help financially with the restoration. There are four levels of membership:

- Members — $10 to $499
- Sponsors — $500 to $999
- Associates — $1,000 to $9,999
- Patrons — $10,000 and more

All funds received go toward preservation efforts at the barn.

All members will receive a subscription to the quarterly Teague Barn News and discounts on purchases at the gift shop once it opens.

Patrons and Associates will be invited to an annual event at the barn, will receive discounts on facility rentals, will be listed on the corporate stationery and will be invited to all public events.

When the barn is eventually opened, there will be no admission charged. However, donations will be accepted from visitors.

Given in marriage by her father, the bride wore a gown of embroidered white satin with a V-notched, strapless bodice trimmed with intricate heading and embroidery that created the asymmetrical lines. The dropped waist led to a slim A-line skirt and a beaded edge, which framed the carriage back over the chapel-length train. Her two-tiered fingertip veil was trimmed in a thin satin ribbon edging and attached to a rhinestone tiara. She carried a bouquet of fresh stems of pastel Gerber daisies and roses in white, yellow, lavender and pink.

Ashley Baer, Urbana, the bride's sister, was the maid of honor. She wore a black and taupe, two-piece satin gown with a band of floral embroidery on the strapless neckline, with a waistline ribbon-style tie belt in taupe and a taupe colored A-line skirt.

She wore a white satin, sleeveless, floor-length gown with a rhinestone bodice and dropped waistline which led to a tulle A-line skirt. Rhys Sinclair, Andrews, son of Eric and Michelle Sinclair, was the ringbearer.

Todd McKillip, Wabash, the bridegroom's best friend, was best man. Groomsmen were Joe Auler and Todd Sites, both of Roann, the bridegroom's brothers-in-law, Dustin Sanders, Wabash, the bridegroom's friend, and Nathan Baer, Urbana, the bride's brother.

Included in the original compositions are "Loveshine," "Loving Him," "And I Am His," "Jesus Loves Me A lot," "Thank You Jesus," "All About Jesus," and "Walking With My Lord."

"All of my songs tell a story or have a message," D'Ann adds, "and that's why they are in a soft, easy listening style. I'm not into the "rock" type of religious music at all."

Now D'Ann and Bobby are actively involved in producing programs for various local groups. "Bobby and I bought a sound system; he told me 'If you expect people to buy the album you'd better put on a quality program,' and he operates the sound mixer board for me. This way we can do it together and travel together. I've put on 15 programs this Spring and already have several more lined up," she added.

The recording of the album took some time away from home, but D'Ann maintains it was well worth it.

"We visited the studio in October of last year, and finished the album in February, but much of that time was in the planning and getting ready -- getting the music prepared and arranged and things like that," she says.

"The actual recording took four days, and I did a lot of the backup vocals for myself by re-recording. The Danny Gaither group did the instrumentals and Dan Daniels, pianist and vocalist, arranged the music and sang some of the backups with me," she continues.

A graduate of Lapel High School, D'Ann spent two years at the University of Utah in Salt Lake City, then finished her bachelor's degree in education at Ball State. "My first job was at Southwood," she says, "where I worked and met my husband, the boys came along and I was through teaching, at least for a while."

"I used to sing in high school musicals, and was with the Ball State Singers for 2½ years, but when I got into coaching I figured I was through with singing," she continued. "After I left Southwood and started staying home raising the boys, I started to get my voice back and started singing at Church, the Wabash Friends Church, and through the Lord's guidance I've been able to come to this...."

D'Ann plays the guitar, "but not well and I didn't play any on the album," she says. "I primarily use recorded background tapes so I can concentrate on the words and the message I want to get across, and the tapes work well through the sound board," she adds, noting that some tapes were made for her by the Gaithers.

"Since we made the album, five more songs have come to me," she says, "and we've gotten them written down and copyrighted so I can include them in my programs," she added, "but at this point we have no plans to make another album. I borrowed the money to make this one and I'm paying it back by selling the records. People's reactions have been good ... it's a little embarrassing actually, but I'm glad people enjoy it. It's been fun to make ... it's neat!"

"The boys recite their voice, of course, they hear it, they're learning, they'll be great!"
